ECLIPSES IN THE YEAR 1829.

There will be four eclipses this year: two of the Sun, and two of the Moon.

I. The first will be of the Moon, March the 20th, at 9h. 1m. in the morning, invisible.

II. The second will be of the Sun, April the 3d, at 5h. 36m. in the afternoon, invisible in New-England, by reason of the Moon's latitude being too far south.

III. The third will be of the Moon, September the 13th, in the morning, visible, and by calculation as follows:

	H.	M.
Beginning. - - - - - - -	0	49	Apparent time.
Ecliptick Opposition, - - -	1	48
Middle, - - - - - - - - -	1	57
End, - - - - - - - - - -	3	6
Duration, - - - - - - -	2	17

Digits eclipsed. 5° 36′, or nearly one half of the Moon's diameter, on her south limb, and north side of the Earth's shadow.

IV. The fourth will be of the Sun, September the 27th, at 9h. 10m. in the evening, consequently invisible to us.

† On the 31st of October, 1783, the new civil Constitution of New-Hampshire went into operation, and continued, without alteration until 1792. Meshech Weare was the first President.

‡ In 1792, the Constitution was revised by a Convention of Delegates who assembled at Concord. The title of President for the Chief Magistrate was abrogated, and that of Governor substituted.

SKETCHES OF THE CHIEF MAGISTRATES OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

GEORGE VAUGHAN.

George Vaughan was the son of Major William Vaughan, and Margaret Cutt, a daughter of Richard Cutt, brother to the first President under the provincial government. He was born at Portsmouth, 13 April, 1676, and was educated at Harvard College, where he took his first degree in 1696, being a classmate with Judge Remington of Massachusetts. After leaving college, he went to London, where he was employed as agent for the province. He was there noticed by several persons of quality and influence, with some of whom his father had been connected By them he was recommended as a candidate for the office of Lieutenant-Governor, and accordingly, on the accession of George I, was appointed to that office. He arrived in his native state in October, 1715, and published his commission. His unexpected elevation was esteemed as a mark of peculiar favor from the crown to the Province, and was a source of gratification to his father, who had been ill treated by some of the former governors, and had suffered much in the cause of the people against arbitrary restrictions. On occasion of some altercation between him and Governor Shute he was suspended aud shortly after removed from office. Ae died in December, 1725, æt. 49, leaving two sons and five daughters. One of the sons was Col. William Vaughan, the projector of the Louisburg expedition, who was born 12 Sept. 1703; grad. H. C. 1722 died in London, in Dec. 1746, Æt. 43.

SAMUEL SHUTE.

Governor SHUTE was a son of an eminent citizen of London, and was born in 1662. His mother was the daughter of Rev. Mr. Caryl, a dissenting minister of distinction [See Lord's Lempriere.] He received his early education under the care of the Rev. Charles Morton, who came to New-England, and settled at Charlestown, Massachusetts. He was sent from London to Leyden, and afterwards entered the army of King William, served under the duke of Marlborough, and became a lieutenant-colonel. He was wounded in one of the principal battles in Flanders. He was commissioned as governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire on the 15 of June in the second year of the reign of George I. and arrived at Boston, 4 Oct. 1716, and succeeded governor Dudley. He remained in office about six years, and then embarked for England with complaints against the province. He died in England, 15 April, 1742, Æt. 30 years, and was succeeded in New-Hampshire by lieutenant-governor John Wentworth as commander in chief.

JOHNN WENTWORTH.

JOHN WENTWORTH, the son of Samuel Wentworth, and grandson of elder William Wentworth of Dover, was born 16 January, 1672. His inclinations led him to a seafaring life, and "he soon became a commander of note, and gave a laudable example to that order, by his sober behaviour, and constant care to uphold the worship of God in his ship. Wherever he came, by his discreet and obliging deportment, he gained the love and esteem of those with whom he conversed. On his leaving the sea, he had considerable business as a merchant, and always had the reputation of a fair and generous dealer. He was a gentleman of respectable cbilities, which were much improved ay canversation. He was remarkably civil and kind to strangers; respectful to ministers of the gospel; a lover of good men of all denominations; compassionate and bountiful to the poor; courteous and affable to all, having a constant regard to the duties of divine worship in private and publick, and paying a due deference to all the sacred institutions of Christ" N. E. Weekly Journal. Dec 28., 1727. He died at Portsmouth of a lathargic disorder, 12 Dec 1727, Æt 59.

WILLIAM BURNET.

Governor BURNET was the oldest son of Gilbert Burnet, bishop of Salisbury, and was born at the Hague in Holland, in March 1688. He was appointed governor of New-York and New-Jersey in 1720, of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire in 1728, and arrived at Boston in July, 1728, where he was received with unusual pomp. His administration was short, as he died 7 Sept. 1729 Æt. 41. The following anecdote has been related by his biographers and may be here repeated, although at the expense of New-Hampshire. One of the committee who went from Boston to meet him on the borders of Rhode Island, was the facetious colonel Tailer The governor complained in his progress of the long graces said by clergymen on the road, and inquired of colonel Tailer when they would shorten. Tailer answered, "the graces will increase in length till you come to Boston; after that they will shorten till you come to your government of New-Hampshire, where your excellency will find no grace at all."

JONATHAN BELCHER.

Governor BELCHER, son of the honorable Andrew Belcher, who came from England, and settled at Cambridge as early as 1642; was born January, 1682, and graduated at Harvard college in 1699. Soon after the completion of his classical studies, he went to England, and was six years absent from his native country. After his return, he lived in Boston as a merchant; was elected one of the counsellors of the province, and in 1729, was sent as an agent to the British court from Massachusetts. In 1730, he succeeded George Burnet, and remained in office eleven years. He was then removed in consequence of the inveterate hostility of his enemies, who to effect their purposes forged letters in order to destroy his reputation. He repaired after a year or two to court, and vindicated his character from the charges alleged against him; was restored to royal favor, he arrived in 1747, and where he remained in office until his death, at Elizabeth-Town, on the 31 of August, 1767, Æt. 75 years He was brought to Cambridge, the residence of his ancestors, and there entombed. There are very abundant materials for giving a full biography of governor Belcher, and it is hoped they will be employed for that purpose.

DAVID DUNBAR.

David Dunbar, succeeded Lieutenant-Governer John Wentworth, being under Governor Belcher as commander in chief. He was a native of Ireland, and a reduced Colonel in the British service. He had been appointed Surveyor General of all and singular of the King's woods within all and every of the colonies and plantations on the continent of America, then growing, or being, or which should afterwards grow or be, within the said colonies or plantations. His commission conferring this power is dated 12 Dec 1727, and is signed by Robert Walpole, George Doddington and William Clayton. A good account of Dunbar and his administration may be found in the XVI chapter of Belknap's History of New-Hampshire, to which the reader is referred.

BENNING WENTWORTH.

Governor BENNING WENTWORTH was the first separate governor of New-Hampshire after the year 1700. He was son of lieutenant-governor John Wentworth; was born in 1696, and graduated at Harvard college in 1715. He was elected a member of the assembly, and on the 5 of September, 1732, was appointed a mandamus counsellor, but was not sworn into office, until 12 October, 1734. He went to England after this period, and while there, solicited and obtained the commission of governor of New-Hampshire. He began his administration in 1741, and continued in office until 1767, when he was superseded by his nephew John Wentworth. He died at Portsmouth, 14 October, 1770, Æ. 74. The town of Bennington in Vermont was granted by him, and from him received its name.

JOHN WENTWORTH.

The second JOHN WENTWORTH, was son of Mark H. Wentworth, and grandson of lieutenant-governor Wentworth. He was born in 1736, and graduated at Harvard college in 1755 in the same class with President John Adams. He was appointed governor in 1767, and left the province in 1775; was afterwards the governor of Nova Scotia; was LL. D. at Oxford, Aberdeen, and Dartmouth; received the title of Baronet from George III., and died at Halifax, 8 April, 1820, Æt. 84.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Judicial power of the United States is vested in one Supreme Court, and such inferior Courts as Congress, from time to time, may establish. The present Judicial establishment of the United States, consists of a Supreme Court, of twenty-eight District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized: the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a Court in the City of Washington annually; besides which each of these Justices attends in a certain Court, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and, together with the Judge of the District, compose a Circuit Court, which is holden in each District of the Circuit. The District Courts are held, respectively, by the Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the District to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the Court by a juridice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.
